Hancock United Way short of goal

United Way of Hancock County has received donations and pledges of less than $30,000, some 54 percent short of its 1987 goal of $65,000, according to 1987 Champaign chairman Lonnie Clayborn, United Way executive director, said.

The campaign committee hopes that year-end and Christmas giving to United Way will help pick up the campaigning.

"Many people give their largest charity donations at the end of the year," he explained.

Bob Breeden, campaign vice chairman, pointed out that a donation must be made before Jan. 1, 1988 in order to be tax deductible in tax year 1987.

Some employers have not yet reported the results of their company United Way campaigns. Hancock United Way hopes to receive these reports soon, Breeden said, adding the Combined Federal Campaign donation to Hancock County UW is also still outstanding.

Many other United Way campaigns emphasize "Fair Share Giving." This is a nationally recognized suggested giving basis at one hour of wages per month.

"Fair Share" represents .06 percent of gross income.

Under the "Fair Share" concept a person earning $8 per hour would give $8 per month or $96 in a year for the support of the 17 agencies who look to Hancock United Way for funding.

Those who have not yet given to Hancock United Way can send their pledges or donations to United Way of Hancock County, P.O. Box 142, Bay St. Louis, MS 39520.

Other co-chairmen for this year's UW campaign include Rosary Eble, David Treutel Jr., Kathy Fernandez and Lou Hall.

Some 17 agencies are supported by the United Way of Hancock County.

Bay school board names Rhodes interim principal

BY DENA BISNETTE

Bay High Assistant Principal Billy Rhodes will take over as the school's interim principal in January.

Assistant High School Football Coach Gale McRaney will serve as interim assistant principal.

The Bay St. Louis-Waveland School District Board approved the appointments Monday on a split vote, Superintendent of Education Roger Oge' stated.

Oge' had recommended both men for the positions after the present principal, Frank Ladner, announced that he would retire at the end of 1987 to work in the private sector.

"I feel honored to serve as principal at Bay High School," Rhodes stated.

"It is a school with an outstanding faculty and staff and a student body that is eager to learn."

"I appreciate the confidence Dr. Oge' and the school board have placed in me in asking me to lead the school through a very important time."

"With the state accreditation standards and other mandates being placed on this school district by the State Department of Education through Bulletin 171, Bay High along with the other schools in the district will be going through a very critical period in the next few months."

"I feel confident that with the cooperation of the school board, the administration and the faculty, Bay High School will do well with school accreditation," the interim principal added.

Rhodes has been working for the Bay-Waveland School District for about 20 years.

He is a graduate of St. Stanislaus and attended University of Southeastern Louisiana for four years on a football scholarship.

He received his bachelor's degree in physical education and administration from University of Southern Mississippi and has master's degrees in physical education and administration from William Carey College.

He was a teacher and coach at St. Stanislaus and Catholic High School in Baton Rouge, La., and an employee of General Electric at NASA's National Space Technology Laboratories before joining the Bay-Waveland School District in 1969 as a physical education and general science teacher and Bay Junior High football and basketball coach.

In 1976 Rhodes became head football and track coach at Bay High, then in 1979 became physical education instructor at North Bay and Waveland elementary schools.

In 1984 he became assistant principal at Bay Junior High and moved up to the high school as assistant principal and director of transportation the following year.

He also served from 1974 to 1985 as a director of the Bay St. Louis Parks and Playgrounds Commission.

Rhodes and his wife, Sandra Rhodes, have two children, Dennis and Terrie, attending University of Southern Mississippi; one son who is a junior at Bay High, Douglas; and two children, Shannon and Stephen, who attend Fifth Grade Center.

McRaney is in his 25th year as an educator and has been employed by the Bay-Waveland School District for seven years.

In addition to working as assistant high school football coach, he has been coaching baseball and teaching science and math at Bay Junior High.

He has had previous administrative experience as a junior high principal at Pearl River Central School in Carriere.

McRaney, a resident of Jourdan River Shores, has also taught in schools in Lumberton, George County, Monticello and Waterproof, La.

He and his wife Polly McRaney have two sons, Stace and Trace McRaney, who are Bay High graduates and currently attend Pearl River Junior College.

"I'm happy to have been selected and I hope I'm able to do the job that will allow me to remain here," McRaney said of the interim appointment.

Grand funds in escrow released

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

County officials reported Friday that $350,683 which has been in an escrow account since June will be released to the Hancock Port and Harbor Commission.

The Governor's Office of Federal-State Programs had required the amount be held in escrow until it could be determined if the commission had complied with guidelines which govern the use of grant funds.

Terms of the $500,000 Community Development Block Grant-Bills Bill Grant required documentation showing jobs creation and that a percentage of the workers in the construction must be from the unemployment rolls.

"It is our determination that Hancock County has substantially complied with the terms and conditions of the contract," according to Jeanie

E. Smith, director of the Department of Community Development.

The commission was given several months time to provide documentation of grant terms compliance or return the money.

The funds had been used to partially fund sewerage and water system improvements at Stennis International Airport.

Port and Harbor Commissioners were surprised to learn that documentation for the grant had not already been submitted.

They became aware of the situation earlier this year when the county government which had applied for a grant for the Catahoula water project was told there would be no further grants until the previous one was closed.

The commission then turned to South Mississippi Planning Development District which had been employed to administer the grant.

Following inquiries the commission learned work on grant documents had been left unfinished by an employee who was no longer with SMPDD.

At this point the project was turned over to SMPDD's Ava Guinn for completion.

A review of the "recently submitted" documents resulted in the letter from Smith regarding release of the funds.

Although Smith said the department is "ready to take all measures necessary to release claims" to the money being held in escrow, she included a warning in the notification letter.

"You should be advised, however, that this office hereby sanctions GRANT—Page 2A

Diamondhead reception to honor new state GOP chairman Evelyn McPhail

Diamondhead resident Evelyn McPhail is the Mississippi Republican party's first full-time state chairman.

She will be honored by Hancock County Republican's this afternoon with a reception at the Diamondhead Welcome Center from 4 to 6 p.m.

McPhail said in accepting this position she will not be a candidate for the Fifth Congressional District seat to be vacated by Republican Trent Lott, who is running for the Senate post of retiring Senator John Stennis.

In this position McPhail will be assisting Republican candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives and the Senate.

McPhail will complete the term of Ebbie Spivey, who retired this week to care for her son who was injured earlier this year in an accident.

Chosen as the state's first full-time chairman, McPhail received a unanimous vote by the state GOP's executive committee over Jerry Gilbreath, a Laurel attorney, who will serve as vice-chairman.

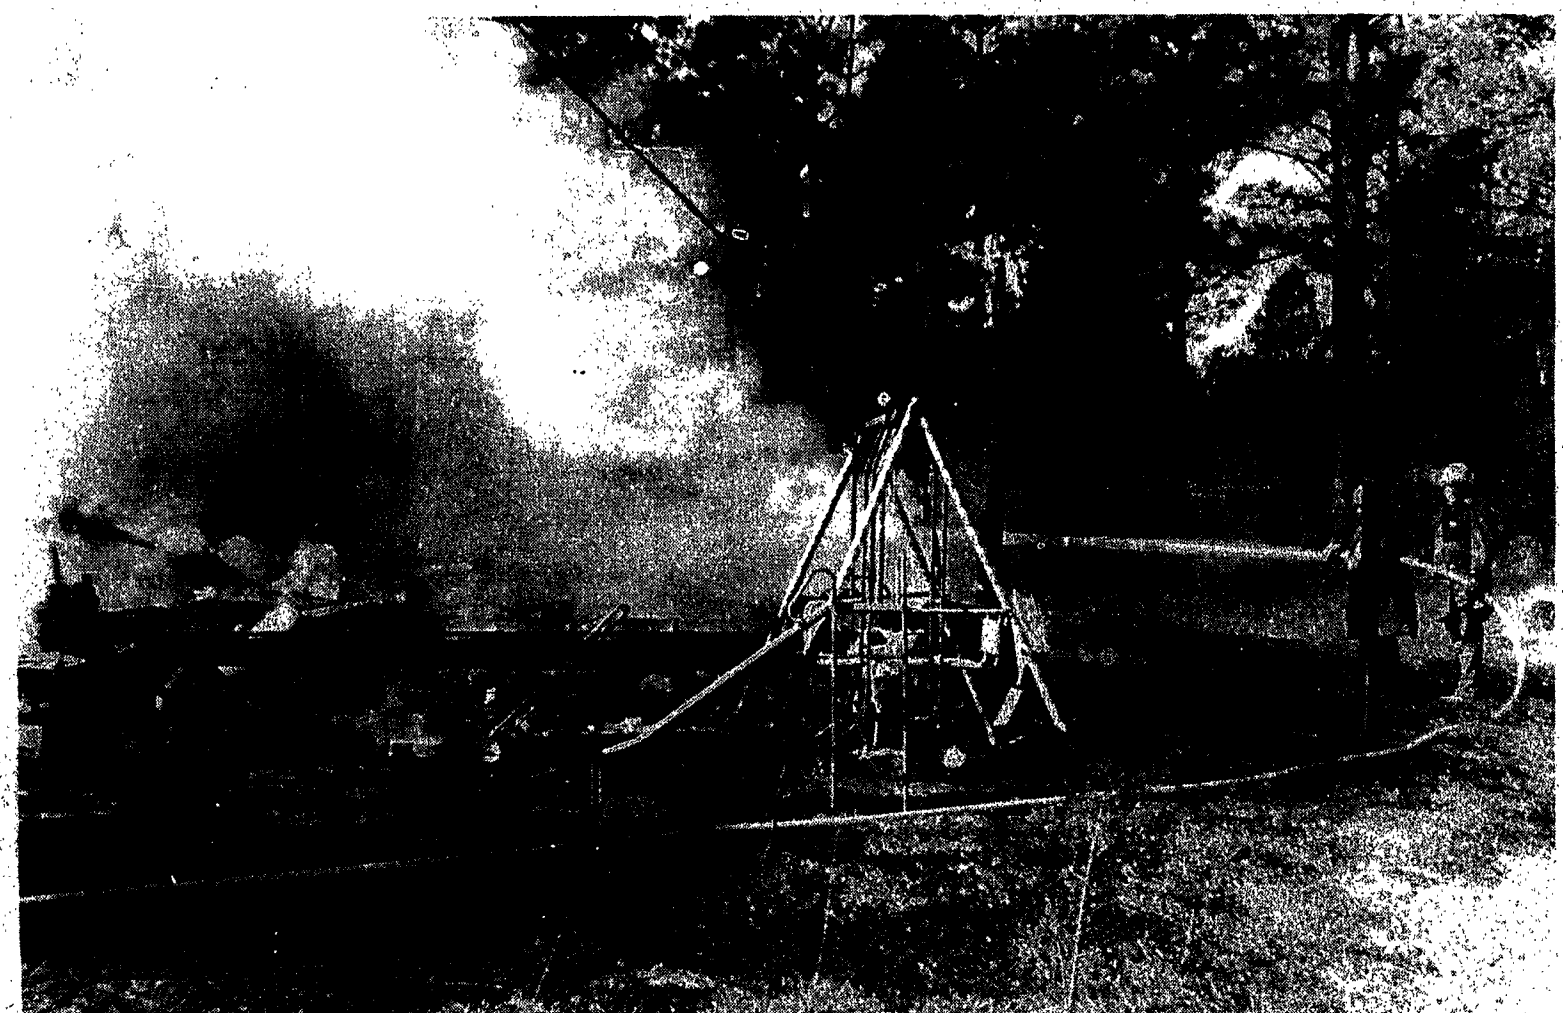

McPhail has been active for several years in the Republican Party and is currently serving her second term as Republican national committeewoman.

BAYSIDE PARK FIRE—A swingset with partially melted plastic seats sits in front of the burning remains of the Donald J. Arceneaux Sr. residence on Tunica Street Thursday as firefighters try to keep the blaze from spreading. BaySide Park Volunteer Firefighter Cindy Gullot said the home was already partially destroyed when firefighters arrived shortly before 11 a.m., but a nearby trailer being threatened by the flames was saved. Gullot said Arceneaux, the only person at home when the fire started in the upstairs section of the wooden house, tried to salvage some of the family's belongings but was unsuccessful. The fire department is accepting donations for the family, which includes three children, a 11-year-old girl who wears size eight or 10 clothing; a four-year-old boy, size four; a baby boy size 18 months to two; a woman, size 18 pants and large tops; and a man size 34-36 pants and medium shirts. Household and other items are also needed. Anyone interested in donating may call Firefighter Albinus Zoernier at 467-8232. BaySide Park volunteers were assisted at the scene by East Hancock Volunteer Fire Department, Waveland Fire Department, Hancock County Sheriff's Department and Coast Electric Power Association. Space heaters best used with caution

By Linda S. Moore
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Following manufacturer's instructions and using common sense are keys to safety when space heaters are in use during the winter season ahead.

"Space heaters are basically safe if you follow their written instructions. But, when people become careless with them, the danger of a fire becomes much greater," said Dr. Frances Graham, housing specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

House fires often occur when people place a space heater too near combustible material. Locating the heater in the center of the room is not necessarily the answer because of the danger of knocking them over. However, Graham recommends placing the heaters no closer than 2 feet to the wall.

Of the two types of space heaters, convective and radiant, the latter requires the most attention. Radiant heaters heat a smaller, specific area compared to convective heaters, which circulate air in one or more rooms.

Graham said heaters that operate on kerosene, gas, propane or butane are most often responsible for causing house fires. Along with the warnings and instructions that come with the heater, Graham stresses the importance of never adding fuel to a warm heater.

When purchasing a heater, look for the Underwriters Laboratory (UL) seal of approval which indicates the heater meets certain safety standards. Some of those standards may include a safety device that will automatically shut the heater off if it is tipped over. Graham recommends that heaters be bottom heavy rather than supported by legs or stands to provide additional balance.

Graham said, oxygen depletion sensors, which will stop the fuel-burning heater if the oxygen level in the room drops below that necessary to sustain life, are also beneficial.

Some other basic safety suggestions when purchasing fuel-burning heaters include purchasing those with push button igniters to eliminate the use of matches. If matches must be used, never leave the box near the heater.

Although safer than fuel heaters, electrical heaters have been known to cause fires when the electrical wall outlet is not adequate to support the heater and an overload occurs.

The housing specialist cautions that extension cords should never be used with any type of heating device, including irons and hair driers, unless the cords are rated for such heat producing appliances. Most extension cords are not heavy enough to support the current needed, Graham said.

Graham said an advantage of electrical heaters over fuel heaters is that the electrical heaters do not use up the oxygen in the air or produce poisonous gases such as carbon monoxide. Fuel heaters need good

Consumer Update on shopping for health insurance

By Janet K. Lukens
Coast Consumer
Management Center

Because escalating health insurance premiums can take a real chunk out of the healthiest of family finances, below are some tips for getting the most for your insurance dollar:

- Shop before you buy. Policies can differ in service, coverage, and cost. Compare several different companies before you buy.
- Don't buy more coverage than you need. Don't attempt to cover 100 percent of your costs. A single comprehensive policy is better than several policies with overlapping or duplicate coverages.
- Don't buy policies for certain diseases or accidents. Get coverage against medical expenses from any cause.
- Be honest when completing you insurance application. False information may prevent you from being paid in the event of a claim.

- Buy a policy that will reimburse you substantially for large medical expenditures. Do not attempt to carry coverage for routine or predictable expenses such as checkups.

- Check for preexisting condition exclusions. They may reduce or eliminate coverage for existing health conditions or require a waiting period before covering preexisting problems.

- Beware of changing policies which may subject you to new waiting periods and new exclusions. Consider adding to your present policy. However do not keep policies that are inadequate.

- Insurance premiums are cheaper if paid on a yearly basis.

For more information on fitting health insurance into your budget and determining your needs, contact the Consumer Money Management Center at 388-4710.

Bill of Fare, Vicksburg, 1863

By Jeannie Roe Gilmore
Confederate troops at Vicksburg had little to laugh about the hot spring and summer of 1863. Their situation was very grim.

Surrounded by Union forces on three sides and with the Mississippi River at their backs to the West, the Southerners spent 48 days under continuous siege in a "camp" extending four miles long and two miles wide. They were exposed to the burning sun during the day and the chilly air at night, and were hit with a murderous storm of "minnie" balls and other missiles. But the Confederate troops made the best of the situation in an astonishingly cheerful and humorous way.

One of their commanding officers, Brigadier General Louis Hebert of the First Louisiana Brigade, would say of them later: "They were crammed up in pits and holes not large enough to allow them to extend their limbs; laboring day and night; fed on reduced rations of the poorest kind, yet always cheerful, always ready and eager if the foe should advance; calm, resolute, their comrades falling around them at every instant under a fire they were forbidden to return..."

At times the Southern troops were so close to the Union forces that only a few yards separated them. On one occasion, history indicates, some of the Confederate pickets became intermixed with the enemy and after some discussion the opposing picket officers arranged their lines by mutual consent, these lines being not more than ten yards apart.

The Southerners were tired, ragged, dirty, hungry, covered with vermin, barefoot, with a scanty supply of ammunition, and with no prospect and little hope of relief. When rain fell they were drenched and had to sleep in the mud. Because of a shortage of water there were no baths or changes of clothing.

At the end of the siege, the two armies were still essentially in the same position—so near, as one officer commented, that "for the last few days the enemy has thrown lighted shells from their works upon our heads of sap (trenches)."

Through it all, the Confederate soldiers were buoyant and courageous, a fact not lost on the Union forces, comprised mostly of mid-Westerners from Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Missouri and Ohio. There were at Vicksburg both Union and Confederate forces from the border states of Kentucky and Tennessee.

With such close proximity a strange sort of camaraderie sprang up between the two camps and it is a matter of history that the men conversed during the long night watches.

The Union soldiers couldn't resist twitting the Confederate men about their main source of food that summer—mule meat. No one, soldier or civilian, who had been in Vicksburg during the siege, ever forgot the mule meat.

One wag in the Confederate trenches (history does not record his name) left behind a scrap of paper which would forever immortalize the mule meat eaten by the people of Vicksburg that summer. It was spirited away by one of the Union soldiers, published in the Chicago Tribune and later reprinted in the Vicksburg Daily Times.

Titled "Confederate Bill of Fare for July, 1863," it was surmounted by a simulated engraving of a mule's head, behind which was a hand brandishing a Bowie knife or perhaps a carving knife. It included the following gourmet delights:

"Soup—Mule Tail

Vegetables—Peas and rice

Entrees—Mule head, stuffed, a la mode Mule beef jerked, a la mexicana Mule ears fricassee, a la Gotch Mule head stewed, a new style, hair on Mule spare ribs, plain Mule liver hashed

Pastry—Pea meal pudding; China berry tarts

Dessert—White oak acorns; Beech nuts Blackberry leaf tea; Genuine Confederate coffee

Liquors—Mississippi water, vintage 1492, superior Spring water, Vicksburg brand

Meals at all hours. Gentlemen to wait upon themselves. Any inattention of servants will be promptly reported at this office. Jeff. Davis and Co., Proprietors."

At the beginning the Confederate officers had hoped their men could hack their way out of the trenches and retreat. When it became obvious that lack of food and ammunition made this impossible, the Confederate soldiers laid down their arms and surrendered on July 4, 1863.

Weakened by hunger but with heads still high, the Southerners marched out of the trenches, nearly 30,000 of them, with colors flying and band playing. "Having saluted their colors, they stacked their arms and returned—prisoners under parole—to camp," said one of their officers.

And the union soldiers cheered, not because they had triumphed, but in applause and admiration for the fortitude of the Southerners who could fight under such terrible conditions.

The author, a free-lance writer now living in Carriere, was born in Vicksburg. Her grandmother, also born in Vicksburg, was about seven years old during the siege and pasted the Bill of Fare clipped from the Vicksburg Daily Times into her scrapbook. The author states that the historical information in the article came from a book, "War of the Rebellion, Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies, Series I, Vol. XXIV," prepared under the direction of the Secretary of War by the late Lt. Col. Robert N. Scott, Third U.S. Artillery, Washington Government Printing Office, 1889.

Quotables by Cuevas

Well there are only five more days until Christmas.

Many of our residents have gotten busy and done some very nice Christmas decorating.

My brother Felton and his wife even won first place for residential decorations in judging by the Bay-Waveland Garden Club in the city of Waveland.

I can remember many years ago when we were youngsters, and that was a while ago, we would place a large lighted silver Christmas star on the roof of our home. Mother was always worried about us putting a whole in the roof.

Felton and Patsy reside at 910 Victoria, in Waveland; second place was awarded to Mr. and Mrs. John Hayward, 920-B South Beach Boulevard; and honorable mention went to Mr. and Mrs. Dix Ashman, 107 Lafitte Drive.

Bay St. Louis winners were, first place, James Austin Sr., 1009 Spanish Trail; tied at second were Earl Cuevas Jr., 112 Chartres Street and Mrs. Marion Beal, 127 Railroad Avenue; and honorable mentions were Mrs. Laura Bernos, 714 Shieldsboro Drive; Terrell LaFontaine, 522 Genin Street; Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Hinson, 524 Eighth Street.; Mrs. McCaleb, 557 St. John Street; and Mr. and Mrs. Clay Sick, 753 Blue Meadow Road.

Mr. Larry's Collectables, 212-A Main Street took first place in Bay St. Louis commercial, with Jeanne's Gift Shop, U.S. Highway 90, Waveland a first place winner.

Winners announced by Diamondhead Garden Club in the decorating contest included, Mrs. Joyce Lyn Tresch, 5424 Diamondhead Drive East; Carol and Lenny Maillho, 5414 Lakeview Court; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pflugfelder, 7722 Mamalu Place; and Mr. and Mrs. L.E. Grice, 6522 Mauna Loa Court.

We realize there are many folks who do not enter their decorations in the contests, so there are other beautiful decorations throughout Bay St. Louis, Waveland, Diamondhead, Pearlinton, Kiln and Hancock County area.

The next few nights would be a nice time to drive around and see how nice the decorations are and if you know someone who has done a fine job let them know.

Thanks to everyone for the decorations.

If you still need a little gift for the wife, you may want to think about giving her one of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) cook books.

The book for only a $3 donation contains recipes provided by RSVP members.

Now these senior residents really know how to cook and in checking a copy I purchased for my wife, I saw what looked like many yummy dishes.

Proceeds from the sales will be used for RSVP projects in the area.

Now all I have to do is get Jane to try some so I can enjoy them.

From Mississippi Economic Council

Additional scholarship awards will be made available to the state's top Star Students this year, said Peggy Howard, vice president for programs of the Mississippi Economic Council.

The increased scholarship funds are made possible by the Phil Hardin Foundation of Meridian.

The Hardin Foundation, along with Sanderson Farms and First Mississippi Corporation Foundation, are sponsors of the MEC Star Student Program, which recognizes the top student in each high school across the state.

Each year, MEC honors the Top 20 Star Students in the state at its annual membership meeting. In past years, the top three students and their teachers were awarded scholarship funds at this meeting.

With the increased Hardin Foundation contribution, all 20 students and their teachers will receive scholarship funds. The awards for the top three students will remain $1,500, $1,000 and $500, with the teachers selected by those students receiving $300 each. The remaining 17 students and their teachers each will receive $100 scholarships. Tom Wacaster, vice president of educational programs of the Phil Hardin Foundation, said, "MEC's Star Program is a well-managed and effective program that encourages outstanding student academic achievement and recognizes outstanding teaching in virtually every high school in Mississippi."

"The Phil Hardin Foundation believes that outstanding teachers are the key to educational improvement in our state. Their efforts and concern and dedication, in turn, result in outstanding student achievement. Better-educated students will provide the vision, knowledge and skills needed for Mississippi to deal with the significant problems and opportunities presented by our increasingly complex world," he said.

The increase brings to $7,300 the annual grant awarded by the Hardin Foundation to the Star Program.

SENATOR SAYS FARM CREDIT ACT SHOULD HELP STABILIZE AGRICULTURAL LOAN SYSTEM

Senator Thad Cochran (R-Miss.) says a Senate-passed farm credit bill should help stabilize the nation's financially-troubled agricultural loan system.

"This bill should assure adequate farm credit and streamline the present Farm Credit System which has experienced so much difficulty the past several years," Senator Cochran said.

The Senate Friday passed the Farm Credit Act Amendments of 1987, a bill Senator Cochran helped construct in the Senate Agriculture Committee.

In addition to overhauling the Farm Credit System, the measure provides financial assistance to the FCS and creates a secondary market for agricultural loans.

The bill is designed to benefit farmers by:

► Assuring adequate sources of credit at competitive rates through a secondary market for agricultural loans;

► Protecting the investments of FCS borrowers with a guarantee of borrower stock at its par value, and;

► Requiring prompt action by FCS lenders to resolve problem loans with emphasis on keeping farmers on their land when it is cost effective to do so.

Also, the bill requires healthy, FCS institutions to honor agreements to share capital with faltering FCS banks, and contribute to the trust fund to back up guaranteed bonds.

It provides up to $4 billion in government-guaranteed bonds, to be repaid by FCS institutions, as assistance to help stabilize those institutions in need.

"This bill is a comprehensive effort to restore the financial health of our Farm Credit System and allow it to continue serving the needs of our agricultural economy and Rural America," Senator Cochran said.

A MEETING WITH GORBACHEV

Washington was consumed recently by the meetings between President Reagan and General Secretary Gorbachev of the Soviet Union.

During the course of the week, the two leaders signed the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces (INF) Treaty and negotiated other important issues such as long-range missiles, regional conflicts, and conventional weapons' balance.

It was an interesting week and an educational one. It gave me the opportunity to observe Mikhail Gorbachev "in his element," so to speak.

Nine Congressional leaders, of which I am one, met with General Secretary Gorbachev for over an hour. It was an enlightening experience.

He is impressive in that he is Western in his style, and so different from his predecessors. In past meetings with Soviet representatives, they have appeared solemn, gruff, and argumentative. Gorbachev is simply none of these. He is much more forthcoming, candid, and charming.

Perhaps this makes him more dangerous. However, there is potential with this new leader to make some progress toward reducing the arms' threats we all fear.

There is no question that as far as numbers of launchers and warheads go, we are going to have to eliminate fewer than the Soviets. That is not to say this action is without risk.

We need to be cautious every step of the way. Mikhail Gorbachev talked a good game. But, as I told him last week, "Mr. Gorbachev, your words sound good and you present them well, but we want to see some action."

The Soviet Union continues to be present in Afghanistan. Support to Nicaragua continues to be sent from Moscow. Human rights continue to be violated in their own country. We need to see some positive action in these areas.

While we still have far to go with the Soviets, I do believe Summit talks are beneficial. It's like a fellow told me while I was in Mississippi recently, "If we're talking, we probably ain't fighting."

While that is true, I cannot stress enough that, when dealing with Gorbachev, we proceed with caution. Though President Reagan and Secretary Gorbachev are trying to make the world a safer place, I feel that Gorbachev may try to take advantage of us through his public relations abilities. We can't let that happen.

ASK OCHSNER

Q. My four-year-old nephew is always sick with ear infections. Every time my sister turns around, she is taking him to the doctor. Is this normal or is something else wrong? Mrs. J.T.T. New Roads, La.

A. Ear infections rank next to routine checkups as one of the most common reasons children are brought to a doctor, says Dr. James Fruthaler, a pediatrician at the Ochsner Clinic in New Orleans.

Children apt to get ear problems are usually besieged by two general types:

The first is serous otitis, which is a buildup of fluid behind the eardrum caused by a blockage of the eustachian tube, which normally drains the middle ear. It may exist chronically, impairing the child's ability to hear, but without causing any discomfort.

Children are generally screened for the condition several times during their school years by health agencies and others. Parents of younger children should be alert for signs of hearing difficulties in infants and pre-schoolers as well as school-aged children. This condition can retard a young child's language development and impair school work since it makes hearing difficult.

Because of repeated trips to the physician, it seems your nephew's condition may fall into the second general category of ear infections known as infective otitis media, a condition accompanied by inflammation and pain. This condition occurs when there is an infection as well as a fluid buildup behind the eardrum.

Antibiotics are used to combat the infection, but the effect on pain is not noticeably reduced for 24 to 48 hours. Heat, particularly, plus Tylenol and ear drops are most effective to alleviate this discomfort.

Dr. Fruthaler says there is a widely reported, and somewhat controversial, therapy of the insertion of a tube through the eardrum to drain the area behind it. If your sister has questions about this procedure, her doctor can explain it and make his recommendations.

Q. What causes tennis elbow and what is the best treatment for it? Mr. D.L.J. Picayune, Miss.

A. Tennis elbow is a common name for epicondylitis of the elbow. Epicondylitis is the inflammation of muscles which are attached to the elbow. This inflammation causes pain along the outside portion of the elbow and even down into the forearm and wrist.

Dr. Charles Johnson, a specialist in orthopedics and sports medicine at Ochsner Clinic in New Orleans, says that although tennis elbow is more commonly associated with racket sports, you need not play tennis to get it. In addition to the pain experienced when playing tennis, other motions of the hand, such as a handshake, picking up a telephone or a heavy book can cause pain in this area.

For those "weekend" tennis players who do experience tennis elbow, it is usually caused by a faulty swing technique, particularly with the backhand, inadequate racquet or string tension, wrong grip size or, the material which the racquet is made of, that is, whether wood, metal or plastic.

Treatment of tennis elbow sometimes can be long and very frustrating for the tennis player. Since tennis elbow is an inflammatory condition, rest of the elbow is essential. In addition, ice compresses are applied and anti-inflammatory medications by mouth may be prescribed.

Occasionally, the injection of cortisone into the affected muscles and tendon areas is helpful. Too many cortisone injections, however, can cause damage to the affected muscles and actually work against the tennis player trying to rehabilitate. After an appropriate trial of conservative treatment, surgery is sometimes considered, adds Dr. Johnson.

Rehabilitation of tennis elbow includes strengthening of the affected muscle group as well as stretching exercises for the elbow. The best medicine, however, is to avoid use of the elbow if possible. Skipping a few tennis matches now can help a person with tennis elbow return to pain free tennis in the future, and also avoid developing a chronic condition, concludes Dr. Johnson.

By Sue Minchew
English Instructor
Mississippi State University

Recently my husband and I gave a surprise party for our son on his 17th birthday, and, of course, we tried to think of everything—snacks, ice cream, cake, decorations—but as it turned out, we had made one fatal omission: We had failed to rent any movies for the kids to watch on the VCR.

My son's best friend seemed appalled that we had overlooked such an essential detail. What would they do for entertainment?

As I hastened to the nearest movie rental place, I began to think about how different things were in my day (the late fifties, early sixties), and I wondered if today's teens could possibly imagine life without tape decks, VCR's, their own cars, and designer clothes.

I think that we were more patient in my era; we had to be because there was very little instant gratification. Generally speaking, only for Christmas or a birthday could we expect to get a special gift: a new sweater, a bottle of cologne, a record album, or a deer hunting rifle.

As a result, we learned to wait and to anticipate, even to save for that cherished item. I can remember my proud savings of $20 (which took me an entire year to accumulate). It seemed like a fortune then. I now look out at least that much to our son for a Saturday night date.

I also remember that movies were a special treat, enjoyed only occasionally when a group of us went to a drive-in or a movie theater in a neighborhood. We usually dated in groups because of the scarcity of cars.

The movies themselves were quite tame by today's standards: lots of kissing, but no nudity or profanity. Sex, if any, was only hinted at with a raging storm or crashing waves.

Violence we had via cowboy and war movies, but it was a very limited and "cleaned-up" violence—no close-ups of a leg blown off or a body riddled with bullets and bathed in blood.

The good guys (John Wayne, Roy Rogers, Gene Autry) were really good guys; no quasi or anti-heroes, they were real heroes who saved the day for their country, their regiment, the wagon train, or their lady fair. Even our horror movies were less horrible, less grotesque, than today's Friday the Thirteenth and Halloween movies, but just as scary. Who can forget the knife's plunging into Janet Leigh's bare torso as she stood in the shower in Psycho?

I still prefer those old movies with their subtlety and mystique to today's more graphic ones. Even in love scenes, the mere suggestion of sex seemed more powerful and much more romantic than the explicit sex scenes that are common today.

We were curious, not promiscuous. It was still considered immoral to have sex before marriage. Girls worried about their reputations; boys about getting girls pregnant.

Moreover, with few cars and very little money or freedom, we didn't have much opportunity to experiment. Even colleges maintained strict curfews and dress codes.

At Delta State in the early sixties, for example, we girls had to meet a 10 p.m. curfew on week nights, midnight on weekends.

We not only could not live off campus but could not even leave campus without signing out on cards specifying our destinations.

As freshmen, we could not keep a car on campus, and none of us could wear shorts or pants outside the dorm. Even the majorettes had to wear skirts over their shorts to and from the practice field.

I wouldn't want to go back to those times and those rules, nor do I want to impose them on today's teens, who are more open and honest, more relaxed about sex and their bodies than we were. However, teens today seem to know too much too soon, often before they are emotionally ready for that knowledge.

Moreover, their knowledge often includes a first-hand acquaintance with drugs and alcohol. In contrast, my generation was quite unsophisticated. In fact, no one in my circle of friends drank, that is, unless you count the bourbon we sneaked from my father's liquor cabinet at a few slumber parties.

Unlike today's teens, however, we did smoke. For us, the mastery of the art of smoking was a required rite of passage. As for other drugs, we had never heard of marijuana or cocaine or Quaaludes. We had heard of Dexadrine, which a few of my college friends used occasionally to stay awake to study for a big test.

Sounds dull? I guess it might to my son's generation. But it really wasn't. We did have fun—plenty of fun. Although ours was a small town with no apparent source of entertainment, we somehow managed to have a good time, and it was a shared good time.

We would gather at someone's house to laugh and talk, play cards, dance to the stereo or radio, or just "act crazy."

Most of the time we gathered at my house, since we owned the only stereo in town, a stereo that my grandfather had won in a crossword puzzle contest.

When hula hoops came out, we had hula hoop contests after school. On Saturdays we played basketball or softball—both boys and girls—or divided into teams to "war" on the tree house fortress in my back yard.

When someone got the family car, six or eight of us would pile in and ride seven miles to the Dairy Bar, the county gathering spot, where we consumed French fries and cherry cokes, gossiped with our friends, flirted with the opposite sex, and danced under the pavilion to music from the jukebox.

Yes, times have changed, and in many ways they have changed for the better. But my son's VCR generation could learn a little from my jukebox generation; it could learn a little patience, a little ingenuity, and if not a little old-fashioned morality, at least a little discretion.

Farm loan eligibility tied to conservation

By Patti Drapala
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Mississippians who continue to farm highly erodible cropland will lose their federal farm loans if they don't have a conservation plan for that land within two years.

Most Mississippi farmers must rely on some type of federal financing to farm and if those Farmers Home Administration loans and deficiency payments are stopped, they could go out of business.

"If you farm highly erodible land, you have to have a plan approved by Jan. 1, 1990, or you're in poor shape," Funderburg said.

Although the state loses 10 tons of topsoil a year, erosion problems are isolated and site-specific. Most erosion sites are in the hills bordering the Delta and in the Black Belt prairie land.

The plan is part of the conservation compliance program mandated by the 1985 Farm Bill. The goal of the provision is to keep farmland from eroding.

Farmers who are concerned about the provision can check with the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) for a detailed explanation of the law. They can also consult with their local Soil Conservation Service (SCS) office to see if they are farming erodible land.

"One cannot determine merely by looking at land if it is highly erodible," Funderburg said.

Farmers who don't have erodible cropland have nothing to worry about. Farmers who do have three choices: submit a conservation plan to the SCS, discontinue farming erodible cropland or continue to farm such land and have farm assistance cut off.

"The farmer must decide if it will cost him more to implement an approved plan or to farm without government benefits," Funderburg said.

If the farmer chooses to farm erodible cropland without complying, he loses government benefits on all his farmland.

One 20-acre field of erodible cropland on a 1,000-acre farm could throw the farm out of compliance if the farmer doesn't have a conservation plan for that field. All acres would be cut off from eligibility.

"The deadline is not that far off," Funderburg said. "If too many people wait until the last minute to have a plan drawn up, there will be a backlog at the SCS office and the plan may not meet the deadline."

County Agent's Notes

By Lee Taylor

Chlordane Usage Update

You'll remember that the insecticide chlordane was in the news a couple of months ago. The Environmental Protection Agency announced in August that chlordane, a chemical used to kill termites, would no longer be manufactured until application techniques could be revised.

The original agreement between the EPA and Velsicol, the manufacturer, has been modified by a federal judge (not too surprising I might add). I promised to keep you updated on the situation. Here's the scoop.

Individuals with existing stocks of chlordane may sell, distribute or use them until Nov. 30, 1987. From Dec. 1, 1987, to April 15, 1988, these stocks may be sold, distributed and used but use is limited by certain conditions. Probably the most important of these limitations is application. Only certified applicators of insecticides can apply the chemical or supervise application. What this means is that if you want to control termites with chlordane, you'll have to hire a certified applicator to do the job or to supervise anyone else applying the chemical.

After April 15, the use of existing stocks of chlordane and its chemical cousin heptachlor will be prohibited by the EPA. I will be receiving guidelines on application techniques of chlordane during these designated periods. Please come by the Hancock County Extension Office if you have a supply of chlordane or you plan to apply it.

Coyote Control

You'd think we were displaced to the wild west because of the appearance of a new pest in Hancock County. If you see a coyote out in the pasture, don't blink because it's not you eyes. They have adopted Mississippi for a home.

It's easy to confuse a coyote with another animal, such as a fox or large dog, if you're not careful. They are larger than foxes but smaller than wolves. Coat colors can vary from white to black to red and all shades in-between.

The coyote is a crafty creature. You aren't in any danger of being attacked by one but your garden may be. The critters have sharp teeth and they enjoy cracking open watermelon rinds to get to the juicy fruit. They also eat anything else the garden can provide, so your Thanksgiving pumpkin may be in jeopardy.

The only means of controlling these critters is to trap and kill them. If you have a problem, come by my office.

20-YEAR INTERVIEWS

What Johnny wanted at 7 was not what he wanted at 14, and then at 21. What does he want today at age 28? What are his dreams, his ambitions, his plans for the future?

These are the questions addressed when a unique documentary, "From 7 to 28 Up," follows the lives of a group of children in a series of seven-year interviews.

The seven-year-old British children were chosen from a variety of backgrounds, and they were questioned about their attitudes, their plans, their emotions and their philosophies of life in the two-and-one-half-hour documentary.

"From 7 to 28 Up" recounts the past 20 years and looks forward to what lies ahead for the participants when the documentary comes to Mississippi ETV at 8 p.m., Wednesday, Dec. 20.

Sweet potatoes for all seasons

With today's interest in nutrition, diet, and physical fitness, consumers want to know about the foods they are eating. They want to know how they fit into a nutritious diet.

The sweet potato is an excellent choice to include in a nutritious diet. A rich source of vitamin A, it also provides worthwhile quantities of vitamin C and small amounts of other vitamins and minerals. Sweet potatoes also provide fiber to the diet.

For the weight conscious individual, sweet potatoes can be a real treat. They have a wonderful spicy-sweet flavor and delicious versatility. One baked sweet potato, 5 X 2 inches, contains about 160 calories. But be careful with the margarine, butter or brown sugar. These add extra calories quickly.

Traditionally, sweet potatoes are served at holiday meals, but they can be enjoyed in many different ways from raw sweet potato sticks with dip to chunks of sweet potatoes in a stew, French-fried sweet potatoes or warm sweet potato muffins. Sweet potatoes can be enjoyed not only during sweet potato season but all year.

Choose sweet potatoes that are firm, smooth, reasonably clean and free from blemishes. Uniform sized potatoes will cook more evenly and thus prevent "pot watching."

Handling sweet potatoes correctly is essential to maintain quality. Handle gently to avoid bruising or breaking the skin, which quickly causes decay. Ideal storage temperature is 55-65 degrees F. Do not put sweet potatoes in the refrigerator. Cold storage leads to injury and an undesirable taste when cooked.

To eliminate loss, cook the entire purchase of sweet potatoes and freeze the excess. This will also allow you to take advantage of good buys during the fall.

Sweet potatoes can be baked, boiled, fried, broiled, microwaved or candied. Before cooking, scrub the skin and trim off any bruised or woody portions.

To Bake

Place in 350°F oven and bake 45 to 50 minutes or until tender. The baking time will depend on the size of the potato.

To Boil

Cook unpeeled sweet potatoes, covered, in a small amount of salted water 20 to 30 minutes or until the desired doneness. For use in salads where cubed or sliced, cook until just barely tender.

To Charcoal Broil

Wrap medium size sweet potatoes individually in heavy duty aluminum foil. Place on grill, about 5 inches from coals. Cook for about 45 minutes or until tender. To hasten, boil 10 minutes before wrapping in foil and bury in coals.

To Pan Roast
Boil for 10 minutes. Drain, peel and add to pan one hour before meat is done, basting four to five times.

To Fry
Pare and cut into lengthwise strips approximately one-half inch thick. Heat oil in deep fryer to 350°F. Fry about five minutes or until they are brown and tender. Drain. Or, in a large, deep skillet, heat ½ inch vegetable oil to 350°F. Add potatoes to cover bottom of skillet; fry five minutes or until brown and tender. Drain.

To Freeze
Cook sweet potatoes using any method until almost tender. Let stand at room temperature until cool. Peel, cut in halves, slice, or mash. To prevent darkening, dip whole or sliced sweet potatoes for five seconds in a solution of one tablespoon citric acid or one-half cup lemon juice to one quart water. To prevent darkening of mashed sweet potatoes, mix two tablespoons of orange or lemon juice with each quart of sweet potatoes. Pack, leaving one-half inch head space. Seal and freeze.

To protect flavor, vitamin C and natural sugar, cook sweet potatoes in their jacket (skins). The skins will slip off easily after cooking. It is better to cook sweet potatoes quickly and to serve them immediately in order to preserve the vitamin C.

When mashing sweet potatoes, a small amount of milk or fruit juice may be added to enhance the flavor and to make the texture better. The natural goodness can also be accentuated with a variety of spices, fruits, nuts, and sweeteners.

For an extra special treat, try the following:

Sweet Potato Punch
► 2 medium sized sweet potatoes
► 2 quarts boiling water
► ¼ teaspoon salt
► 1½ cups sugar
► 1½ cups pineapple juice
► 1 12-oz. can undiluted frozen orange juice
► ¼ cup lemon juice
► ½ teaspoon cinnamon
► ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
► ¼ teaspoon mace
► 5 whole cloves or 2 pinches ground cloves
► Gingerale or carbonated fruit drink
► Orange, lemon, strawberries
Peel and slice potatoes into boiling water, add salt and cook until very, very soft. Puree in blender. Cook sugar and juices about 10 minutes, add spices, and bring to boil again.

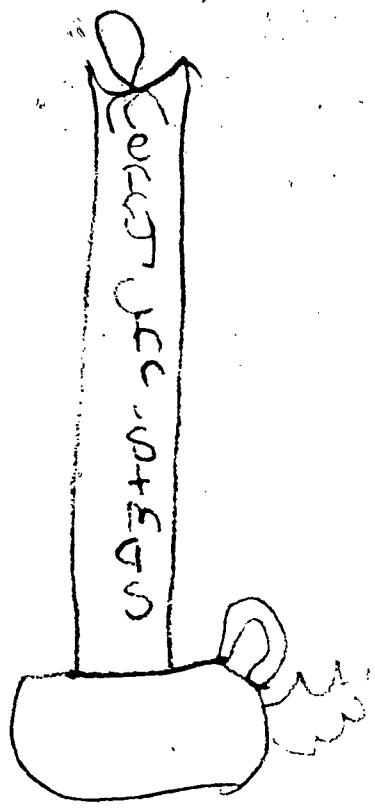

Remove whole cloves. Add sweet potato puree, and stir until well mixed, refrigerate. This mixture will be rather thick. To serve, mix concentrate with 2 or 3 parts gingerale or carbonated fruit drink and pour over ice in punch bowl. Garnish with thinly sliced orange, lemon or strawberries. The concentrate may be frozen. After thawing, mix thoroughly before adding gingerale or carbonated fruit drink. Makes ½ gallon concentrate or about 1½ gallons of punch.

Stuffed Sweet Potatoes
► 6 medium sized sweet potatoes, baked
► ½ pound mushrooms, sliced
► 6 tablespoons butter
► 1 teaspoon salt
► ¼ teaspoon fresh ground pepper
► 2 eggs, beaten
► 1½ cup fresh orange juice
► 2 tablespoons grated orange rind
Bake sweet potatoes 1½ hours at 375°F, or until soft. Cut a thin slice from the top of each potato, lengthwise, and carefully scoop out the pulp. Mash. Sauté mushrooms in 4 tablespoons of butter. Mix the pulp, mushrooms, seasoning, eggs, orange juice, and grated rind. Stuff shells with mixture and dot with remaining butter and bake in 375°F oven until brown (about 20 minutes). Serves 6.

Sweet Potato Walnut Bread
Prepare this quick bread a day in advance for fullest flavor. Bread stays fresh for several days if wrapped with aluminum foil. Also freezes well.

► 1 cup vegetable oil
► ¾ cup brown sugar
► 2 eggs
► 1 teaspoon vanilla
► 1½ cups all-purpose flour
► 1½ teaspoons baking soda
► ¼ teaspoon salt
► 1 teaspoon cinnamon
► 1 teaspoon orange peel
► 1½ cups peeled, grated sweet potatoes
► 1 cup chopped walnuts

In large bowl, mix oil, brown sugar, eggs and vanilla. Sift together flour, soda, salt and cinnamon; stir in orange peel. Add to sugar mixture; mix well. Fold in grated sweet potatoes and walnuts. Pour into greased and floured 9 X 5 X 3-inch loaf pan. Bake in 350°F oven 55 to 60 minutes or until center springs back when gently pressed. Cool in pan 10 minutes; turn out on wire rack; cool completely. Top with orange Glaze, if desired. Makes 1 loaf. Orange Glaze: Combine ¼ cup powdered sugar, 1 teaspoon orange peel and 1 tablespoon orange juice; stir until smooth. Drizzle over top of loaf.

American Legion
Auxiliary Unit 139

On Monday, Dec. 14, the Clement R. Bontemps Auxiliary, Unit 139, held its regular monthly meeting at the Legion home. Mrs. Mattie North, president, opened the meeting and Mmes. Patricia Gillan and Christie LaFontaine, color bearers, advanced the colors.

Mrs. Roslyn Weathers, chaplain, read the prayer, which was then followed by the Pledge of Allegiance and the recitation by the membership of the Preamble.

The regular order of business was dispensed with so that the Christmas party could begin. Each member was to bring a covered dish as well as a gift to be "swapped." There was quite a variety of entrees as well as many delicious desserts that the ladies had made.

Mrs. Beatrice Ladner had an interesting assortment of games to be played and all had a lot of fun participating in them.

Mrs. North called out names for entrance prizes which were gleefully received. Then the members were given their gifts which was followed by "ohs and ahs" when they were opened up to see that they had gotten in exchange.

At this time the auxiliary officers and members would like to wish all of our ailing and recuperating members a healthier and merrier Christmas and New Year 1988.

On Tuesday, Dec. 15, Mmes. Hazel Wohlschlegel, Mamie Carver, and Roslyn Wathers visited the Veterans Hospital in Gulfport for the regular monthly ice cream and cake party. Then the ladies distributed Christmas gifts to the veterans which were happily received. We received our happiness in the saying, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Putting home on the line

Equity loans lure consumers

Debt-ridden homeowners, searching for an easy way to extend consumer credit and still take advantage of new tax laws, may be falling prey to the lure of home equity loan promotions.

According to Dr. Frances Graham, a housing specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, the advantages of these loans are limited and homeowners already facing credit problems could end up homeless.

"These loans are a deadly weapon," Graham said. "Consumers are going to end up deeper in debt and some are going to lose their homes because they don't understand how these loans work."

One heavily advertised point is that interest paid on these loans "may" be deductible. According to Graham the interest is only deductible if the money borrowed is used for home improvements, medical or educational expenses.

"If you take the money and buy a new refrigerator or a car, this is still consumer credit and it is not deductible under the new tax laws," she said.

"In addition to this, the home equity loan places a second lien on the home. The home, not the item bought with the money becomes collateral," Graham said. "If the consumer can not make their payments, they stand to lose their homes."

There are also hidden expenses of these loans that make them a poor financial option. Taking out a home equity loan involves the same process as that of buying a house. The borrowers must pay closing costs such as appraisal, title searches and discount points.

"And, even if the homeowner uses $1,000 of a $10,000 loan, he still pays closing costs on the higher amount," Graham said.

Graham believes another danger of these loans is that consumers will combine all their debts into one home equity loan, believing the interest will be tax deductible.

"When consumers do this, they end up with one large payment to cover all of their previous debts," Graham said. "Then, they tend to start reusing the credit cards and personal loans they paid off and end up in a debt situation they can not handle."

Other disadvantages of these loans include their effect on credit ratings and the variable interest rates charged.

"The entire line of credit, whether used or not, will be listed on individual credit ratings," Graham said. "This could affect other credit opportunities."

Graham said there is also a variable loan rate aspect to take into consideration. Interest rates on most home equity loans fluctuate with the prime rate. If the interest rates increase, so will the payments.

"Home equity loans are not the quick solution to personal financial problems," Graham said. "In fact, they could be the end-all for already debt-ridden consumers."

Wetlands Division Scientific-Statistical Saltwater Fisheries

► OYSTER SEASON—Mississippi's 1987/88 oyster season was opened Monday, Oct. 26. A six sack commercial tonging limit and a ten sack dredging limit were established. Recreational oystermen are limited to a three sack daily catch.

Pre-season sampling results do not show much promise for the season, and like most other Gulf states, Mississippi is predicting a poor harvest of the mollusks.

► SHRIMPING—Certain waters south of the shoreline in each of the three coastal counties were opened to shrimping following a commission order issued on October 20. The order which became effective on Friday, October 23, permits shrimpers to harvest populations of white shrimp that have migrated into these nearshore waters.

► Bureau of marine Resources Third Annual Workshop—The Division of Saltwater Fisheries held a panel discussion of fisheries issues at this annual event. Representatives of both the recreational and commercial fishing communities were present. Among the key issues discussed were needs for increased enforcement of existing regulations, needs for increased education of fishermen regarding size limits and other management measures, and modified gear restrictions on certain types of commercial gear. Overall, despite poor attendance, the event was judged to be a success and of benefit to all in attendance.

► Division Chief, Dr. Fred Deegen, recently attended the Gulf States Marine Fisheries Commission meeting in Key West, Florida, where he chaired the meeting of the Recreational Fisheries Committee and represented Executive Director Bill Quisenberry on the Commission. Development of intra jurisdictional fisheries management plans was the principal item of discussion.

► The 1988 Mississippi Guide to Saltwater Fishing Regulations is finally in press and should be made available to the public in the next week. Your copy may be obtained by contacting this office.

► Creel survey results for October indicate that this has been an excellent month for coastal recreational fishermen. A decline in nearshore water temperatures has resulted in increased catches of red drum, spotted seatrout, white seatrout, and flounder in particular. And the first catches of striped bass from the bay areas were also recently reported.

► A new official state record for lane snapper (Lutjanus synagris) was awarded to Terry R. Saucier of Pascagoula. The 3.52 pound snapper was taken in July some nine miles south of Pascagoula and is currently under world record consideration.

► The Commission also approved adding gafftopsail catfish (Bagre marinus) to the official record listing. The current record belongs to Donald C. Dale of Biloxi whose 5.92 pound gafftop, caught in Magnolia Bend of Back Bay Biloxi, was taken in May.

Scientific-Statistical

► The Scientific-Statistical division participated in the BMR's recent Coastal Workshop by conducting sessions on Aquaculture in the Coastal Area, Coastal Oil and Gas Activities, Utilization of Seafood Wastes and Debris in the Marine Environment. Staff members and invited guests gave presentations which were followed by open discussions.

► Staff member Jim Franks and Dianne Hunt of the BMR's Wetlands Division organized the BMR's participation in the nationwide observance of Coastweeks '87 (Sept. 19 - Oct. 10). The nation's primary focus this year was upon the problem of marine trash. As part of their efforts, Franks and Hunt initiated several activities toward elevating the local public awareness of the growing environmental concern over marine trash within our coastal environment.

As work proceeded, the BMR received the endorsement of local governmental bodies and many organizations. To date, these efforts have culminated in local newspaper articles and editorials, T.V. spots, radio interviews, the printing of brochures, and posters and participation in a beach cleanup on Ship Island.

► Marine trash is far more than an eyesore, it presents serious problems for coastal environments and living marine resources. Until recently, marine trash was looked upon as more of a nuisance, considered to be of little importance compared to other pollutants. Information that is now becoming available suggests, however, that problems caused by marine trash may rival or exceed those resulting from some better known pollutants. Reports show that literally hundreds of thousands of marine animals such as porpoises, seals, whales, birds and fish die every year, worldwide, from encounters with plastic at sea.

► Let's all show respect for our coastal home and its wildlife and fishery resources; stop this littering and trashing of our waters and beaches. It's an individual responsibility, everyone's actions count. We're either part of the solution or we're part of the problem. It's up to us.

Bill Koch, Olympic silver medalist, has found that a cross-country ski exerciser helps keep him in shape during the off-season.

Fitness Facts

A HOME FITNESS EXERCISER
THAT BEATS BIKES AND ROWERS

More exercise bikes and rowing machines are sold each year than any other exercise device—in 1986, the total was close to four million. Recently, the dominance of these machines has begun to be challenged by exercisers that duplicate the motion of cross-country skiing, the best aerobic exercise available.

Even if you've never strapped on skis in your life, this type of exerciser may be worth considering for your in-home exercise program. Recent university studies by the Human Performance Laboratory at Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland determined that these unique devices provide a more efficient workout than either a bicycle exerciser or a rowing machine.

Researchers at the Human Performance Lab recently tested one cross-country ski machine, the NordicTrack, against bicycle and rowing units.

The controlled tests established that oxygen use (VO_2 max) was highest on the cross-country machine.

Because oxygen usage is the best measure of exercise performance, the researchers concluded that a cross-country ski exerciser provides a more efficient aerobic workout than the bike and rowing machines tested.

Cross-country ski exercisers typically take up little floor space, and can be folded-down when not in use, thus making them perfect for set-up in a bedroom or rec room. The machines imitate the natural, fluid motion of actual cross-country skiing, and build cardiovascular fitness while providing a sensation of pleasant, continuous exercise. Even for a skiing novice, the machines are easy and fun to use.

Bill Koch, winner of an Olympic silver medal for cross-country skiing, uses a cross-country ski exerciser machine for off-season training.

Koch says the key features to look for when evaluating this type of exerciser are: 1) variable elevation adjustment, so the unit's running surface can be used at different angles; 2) a folding design, so the machine can be easily stored when it's not being used; and 3) a flywheel mechanism to realistically duplicate the resistance and smooth, natural movement of actual skiing.

As you are looking at your holiday gift list, or considering your personal exercise needs, you may want to research the available cross-country ski exercisers.

The November, 1986 issue of the leading U.S. consumer magazine reviewed six different machines, and provides an in-depth assessment of the benefits of this type of exercise. Also, NordicTrack will provide a free brochure and videotape on the benefits of cross-country ski machines; the Human Performance Lab research report is included with the literature (call 1-800-328-5888, ext. 625; in Minnesota, 612-448-6987, ext. 625).

WETLANDS DIVISION

► COMMISSION CONSIDERS WETLANDS PERMITS—The Commission on Wildlife Conservation considered the permit requests of James Daspit and the Cinque Bambini Group at their November meeting.

Mr. Daspit's permit request for filling wetlands adjacent to his house for a road was denied, and the permit request for a canal by the Cinque Bambini Group was held in abeyance pending further study by the staff.

► Staff participates in marsh transplanting project—Larry Lewis of the Wetlands Division and Gary Cuevas of the Coastal Programs Division provided technical assistance to students from Bayou View Jr. High who participated in an effort to expand the marsh area on the West side of the Courthouse Road Pier.

The project was coordinated by Jeff Taylor of the Southern Mississippi Planning and Development Commission and was intended to demonstrate to the students the importance of the marsh in erosion control.

Approximately 150 marsh plants were transplanted from the existing marsh to barren beach sites adjacent to the marsh with hopes that the marsh transplants will help to stabilize the beach areas at Courthouse Road Pier. The project will be monitored over time to determine the survival rate and success of the transplanting operation.

► AGENCIES TO STUDY Grand Batture Island rebuilding—Joe Gill, Jr., Jerry Mitchell, and Richard Leard attended a meeting with officials from Alabama to discuss the feasibility of rebuilding the Grand Batture Island Chain. The Grand Batture Islands have been subjected to tremendous erosion by winds and waves and have practically disappeared.

Plans will focus on how the Islands can be rebuilt using dredged material from dredging projects in the vicinity of the Grand Batture Island Chain.

The Islands at one time protected the highly productive Pt. Aux Chenes Bay creating a sheltered estuarine area. With the loss of the Islands, the area is subject to heavy wave action and erosion of the fragile marsh areas around the Bay.

Consumer Update on Housing Decisions

By Janet K. Lukens
Coast Consumer
Management Center

Because housing may claim as much as 30-35 percent of the average family's income in the form of rent or house payment with interest, taxes, insurance, utilities, furnishings, and equipment; housing decisions are important ones. Below are some financial suggestions and guidelines when determining whether to rent or to buy.

To accurately estimate the amount you can safely and comfortably spend on your housing expenses, consider your dependable monthly income, your monthly obligations and salary deductions, your present expenses for housing, and your proposed housing expenses. It is usually recommended that you spend no more than one-fourth of your monthly income on rent or mortgage payments.

There are more than monetary considerations in your housing decision, however. You may want to buy when:

1. You expect to stay in the community,
2. Prices of homes are stable or increasing.
3. You have money for a substantial down-payment (a down-payment of 20 to 25 percent is often advised).
4. You have a safe "cushion" in your budget above daily living cost to pay the mortgage and house upkeep. Two to six months take-home pay is recommended.
5. Satisfactory rental property is not available.

You may want to consider renting when:

1. You might move to another town within a few years.
2. You don't have money for a substantial down-payment.

3. Future income is not assured so that payments can be made with a margin of safety.

4. Prices are declining.
5. Renting costs less.

6. You want to postpone the costs of furnishing a home.
Contact the Consumer Money Management Center at 338-4710 for more free information on your housing decisions.

ETV Briefs

STORYTELLERS

Heidi, Rebecca, Paul, Monica, Justin and Britt love to tell stories. These six young children were part of a group of 27 youngsters, ranging in age from 10 to 15, who made an unprecedented tour of the Soviet Union to share their stories and hopes for peace.

Their odyssey is chronicled when "Young Storytellers in Russia" airs at 10 p.m., Monday, Dec. 28, on Mississippi ETV.

The young storytellers had an opportunity to communicate with audiences in Moscow, Odessa and Leningrad during their 18 days behind the Iron Curtain.

"Once in the Soviet Union, the six children...proved to be excellent ambassadors. Their candid and fresh observations are featured in 'Young Storytellers in Russia.' There is no adult narration, only the children's articulate, penetrating, sincere and sometimes funny comments," said documentary filmmaker Jean Walkinshaw.

MPC decreasing electricity costs for 1988

Mississippi Power Company customers are getting a Christmas present from the Gulfport-based utility—lower electricity costs for 1988.

For the fifth year in a row MPC is lowering the customer fuel charge. After the first of the year, residential customers will see about a two percent decrease in the price for 1,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity, with the total bill falling from $61.79 to $60.64.

All-electric residential customers, who receive a discount from December through March, will see their bill for 1,000 kilowatt-hours decrease from $47.78 to $46.63 during those months.

"We have been able to lower our fuel costs for the past five years by negotiating new coal contracts, improving efficiencies at our generating plants and lowering fuel transportation costs," Alan Barton, company president said. "These savings have been passed right along to our customers."

The fuel component of electric bills is adjusted each December for the coming year. The procedure, approved and audited by the state Public Service Commission, allows utilities to recover the cost of fuel burned to produce electricity.

"We calculate the fuel factor each December for the coming year," Barton said. "This is based on the forecasted cost of fuel, kilowatt-hour sale forecasts and past expenses for fuel."

Mississippi Power generates more than 90 percent of the electricity customers buy with coal, the cheapest fossil fuel available.

"This decrease means we will continue to have some of the lowest rates in the nation," Barton said. "Our customers are paying seven percent less for 1,000 kilowatt-hours today than they did in 1983. I don't know of any other product that can do so much that costs less today than five years ago."

Mississippi Power Company is a member of the Southern Electric System and serves more than 174,000 customers in 23 southeast Mississippi counties.

Keesler provides aid to O'Hare

Keesler came to the aid of one of the nation's busiest airports recently.

A fire last month at Chicago's O'Hare airport destroyed a solid-state instrument landing system used by arriving aircraft.

The Federal Aviation Administration turned to the Air Force for a replacement system. One was located in the 3410th Technical Training Group, where it had been used to train navigational aids equipment specialists.

The 3410th TTG was no longer using the equipment and had scheduled it to be dismantled.

Members of the 2052nd Communications Group were sent to the 3410th TTG to disassemble the system and prepare it for shipping. Within 24 hours of notification of O'Hare's need for the equipment, it was picked up by a shipper contracted by the FAA for delivery to the Chicago airport.

The $85,000 system is still in operation at O'Hare.

Chicago Symphony, guests to celebrate conductor's birthday

CHICAGO—The 75th birthday of one of the world's most respected and recognized conductors, Sir Georg Solti, will be celebrated in a musical tribute entitled, "Solti at 75: A Celebration!"

Taped at Chicago's Orchestra Hall, the program features outstanding performances by Sir Georg as both conductor and piano soloist, soprano Kiri Te Kanawa, tenor Placido Domingo, pianist Murray Perahia, and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

This hour long special, presented by WTTW/Chicago and underwritten by Ameritech, will be telecast on Monday, Dec. 28 at 9 p.m. on PBS.

"We are proud to be sharing this 75th Birthday gala performance with music lovers across the country," said Ameritech Chairman and Chief Executive Officer William L. Weiss. "Sir Georg Solti and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra represent the outstanding quality of the cultural institutions that make their home in America's heartland."

"Solti at 75: A Celebration!" includes pictorial essays, film clips and interviews which highlight Sir Georg's remarkable life and career.

International music celebrities including Joan Sutherland, Leonard Bernstein, Itzhak Perlman, Placido Domingo, Pilar Lorengar, Robert Merrill, Kiri Te Kanawa, Christa Ludwig, Murray Perahia, Eva Mar-

ton, Timor Katona, Sherrill Milnes, and Richard Bonyngue wish Maestro Solti a "Happy Birthday."

The musical segments featured in the program begin with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra performing Johann Strauss' Overture to his operetta "Die Fledermaus" ("The Bat").

This piece is led, in a rare appearance as a conductor, by celebrated tenor Placido Domingo. Mr. Domingo has been conducting orchestras around the world since making his United States conducting debut with the New York City Opera in 1973.

This is immediately followed by another rare moment as Sir Georg, sitting opposite pianist Murray Perahia, performs Mozart's concerto for Two Pianos, E Flat major (K. 365). This is Solti's first appearance as piano soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

The musical segments continue with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra's first resident composer, John Corigliano's "Campana di Ravello" ("Bells of Ravello"), a composition receiving its world premiere. This piece was scored with a hidden birthday greeting to Sir Georg and is directed by Associate Conductor, Kenneth Jean.

For the first time in Orchestra Hall, the CSO brings to life excerpts from Giuseppe Verdi's "Otello," Act I. Dame Kiri Te Kanawa as Desdemona and Placido Domingo as Otello bring the television performance to a rousing conclusion.

"Solti at 75: A Celebration!" will be broadcast in television stereo sound as well as stereo simulcast over radio superstation WFMT which is heard on cable systems throughout the continental United States.

This national simulcast is being underwritten by Ameritech, the Chicago-based parent of the Bell companies serving Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, and Wisconsin, and several other communications-related companies.

"Solti at 75: A Celebration!" is a production of WTTW/Chicago in association with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and D'Alesia Productions. Executive producer is Lisa Ferraro.

SIR GEORG SOLT

Many Southerners descended from Scots

BY DR. BETTY DRAKE
HATTIESBURG—The term "Scotch-Irish" is frequently heard in conversations about ancestors.

To many, the term means "part Scotch and part Irish." However that is not the meaning. It is entirely a geographic designation.

King James of Scotland's reign is noted for his settlement of Scots families in the northern counties of Ireland, notably Ulster. The King particularly favored the "lowland" Scots who were peace-loving and Protestants.

In time, living in Ireland became oppressive and many families migrated to the American colonies. A two-volume work by Charles Hanna, "The Scotch-Irish," gives the details for this migration.

Other materials that list many of the immigrants by name are: "Dictionary of Scottish Emigrants to the USA"; (2) "Directory of Scots in the Carolinas," 1680-1830; (3) "Ulster Sails West"; (4) "Records of Emigrants From England and Scotland to North Carolina," 1774-1775; (5) "Directory of Scottish Settlers in North America," 1625-1825, in six volumes; (6) "Directory of Scots Banished to the American Plantations," 1650-1775; and (7) "The Scotch-Irish in America."

Some of these titles concern Highland Scots as well as the Scotch-Irish. So many southern families are descendants of the Scots that these sources should not be overlooked.

SPEAKING OUT

Terrence Scanlon
Chairman
U.S. Consumer Product
Safety Commission
Washington, D.C. 20207

It's a rare Christmas season that you don't find holiday tragedies making the headlines. The scenarios seem all too familiar: a home destroyed after a cut Christmas tree caught fire, perhaps when the family left the tree lights on when they went to bed. . . an overloaded electrical extension cord ignited, causing extensive fire damage. . . a family killed in a fire blamed on lighted candles placed too close to holiday decorations.

The Christmas season need not be an occasion for accidents or fires if you incorporate safety into your holiday decorating while eliminating potential sources of danger. To help you survive the holidays without making the headlines, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission offers the following safety tips:

• Cut Christmas Trees. If you have yet to buy the tree, check to be sure the tree is still fresh. Needles that don't break when bent between the fingers mean the tree is fresh; brittle branches and shedding needles are a sign of dryness. Then, once you have made your selection and brought the tree home, make a fresh cut above the base of the trunk and stand the tree in a container of water until it is to be moved indoors. Later, keep the tree stand filled with water while the tree stays indoors. Shut down any heat source near the tree, and be sure to display the tree away from the door so family members may exit the room quickly in an emergency.

• Tree Lights. Use electric lights only on real and non-metallic artificial trees, never on metallic trees because of a possible electrocution hazard. When buying new lights, look for a certified testing laboratory seal of approval on the package. If you are using old lights, check for broken or cracked sockets, loose connections or bare or frayed wires before mounting them on the tree. Use lights labeled for outdoor use when illuminating doors and trees outside the home. Be sure to turn off all lights when leaving the home or going to bed.

• Decorations. Never use lighted candles on trees or near evergreen decorations. When used, candles should be placed far away from decorations and other materials which could ignite and burn; put candles on safe footing so they cannot topple over, and burn only when someone is in the room. When buying holiday decorations, shop for flame-resistant materials. Use tinsel or artificial icicles that do not contain lead to avoid possibility of poisoning. If you're uncertain about old tinsel and such, discard and buy new decorations. If you spray trees and decorations with artificial snow, read the directions before spraying.

• Fireplaces. Do not burn gift wrapping paper in the fireplace; aside from the intense heat released by gift wrappings, there is always the risk of creosote in the flue igniting and triggering a chimney fire. Gather up gift wrappings as soon as gifts are opened and stash the wrappings in trash can liners for the sanitation crew. When burning wood in the fireplace, always keep the firescreen in place.

• Extension Cords. It's almost certain that you'll be using extension cords indoors for the holidays, so use them wisely. Are your old cords in perfect condition or should they be replaced after years of use? Don't overload wall receptacles or extension cords used for illuminating your home for the holidays. Also, always be sure to look for the independent laboratory certification when buying extension cords.

Finally, plan ahead for safety. There's never been a substitute for common sense when it comes to holidays or day-to-day living!

Holiday giving should be handled with care

BILOXI—The holiday season is upon us. At this special time of year when the spirit of giving overtakes so many of us, the Better Business Bureau of Mississippi reminds donors to temper their generosity with care and consideration.

Many worthy causes benefit greatly each year from the philanthropic feelings that grow in us at yuletide. The fundraising efforts of religious, charitable and assistance organizations generally reach their climax during the holidays.

The BBB applauds the generosity of Mississippians as they dig deep in their pockets to selflessly support those endeavors in which they believe.

But givers must keep in mind that there will be those who will attempt to take advantage of this readiness to give for their own personal enrichment.

"That much money changing hands on little more than a kind word could hardly escape the notice of the con artist," observes BBB Manager AnaLeisa Thompson.

"We can't let our good feelings at this time of year cloud our judgment," Thompson continues. "Our donations can only help if we put them in the right hands."

Through its Philanthropic Advisory Service, the Better Business Bureau offers information on many charitable and other soliciting organizations. Persons who are contacted by such a group asking for a contribution can call the Bureau at Biloxi to find out more about it.

Among other things, the reports contain information about when the organization was established; what programs and services it offers; how much of the money it collects is actually spent on those programs and services; and whether its fundraising practices meet BBB standards.

The Better Business Bureau encourages community efforts to aid those in need. "But the responsibility of channeling the available funds where they will do the most good lies with us as contributors," says Thompson.

"It is, after all, our money. Before they expect us to part with it, fund-raisers should be willing to provide us information about how it will be spent."

The BBB offers contributors these tips for wise giving:

► If a solicitor comes to your door, ask first to see proof of permission from local authorities to conduct a canvass. Most communities require fund-raisers to register with law enforcement or other municipal agencies before conducting a door-to-door campaign. Don't open your door to a stranger who fails to display adequate identification.

► Always ask for the complete name and address of the organization the solicitor claims to represent and check it out. Many have been told their donation would help the poor, homeless, abused, abandoned or handicapped only to discover later that no recognized charitable or aid society for such causes ever received the money.

► If contacted by telephone, also ask for the number at which you might return the solicitor's call after deciding whether to give. If the caller seems reluctant to give you this information, there might be a very good reason. Even if you are given a number, check it out.

► Call the Better Business Bureau at 374-222 to corroborate what you have been told by a fund-raiser before deciding to give.

► If you decide to contribute, it is best to pay by check and make it payable to the charitable organization, never the solicitor or "cash." The cancelled check will serve as a receipt for your tax records.

Quail being raised as new enterprise

By Patti Drapala
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service
MISSISSIPPI STATE—More than 5 million bobwhite quail are being raised in Mississippi each year and every one of them is sold.

Poultry may be renowned for giving bird producers a steady income but this other industry may one day be recognized for its contributions to the farmer's pocket, too.

While the infant quail industry does not generate significant farm income, it can be profitable, thanks to efforts by the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, the Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station and the Poultry Science Department at Mississippi State University.

"We have enough knowledge and expertise for our producers to profitably raise the birds in Mississippi," said Dr. Robert Haynes, Extension poultry specialist and professor of poultry science.

Work on developing a quail industry for the state began in 1975 and interested producers formed an association later that year. More than 200 individuals, half of them commercial producers, raise the quail. The producers are scattered throughout the state. "Through the years, we have gradually learned more and more about bobwhite quail—disease, housing, equipment and nutrition," Haynes said.

Mississippi bobwhite quail are commercially sold here and out-of-state. About half of them are sold as dressed birds and the rest are sold to game reserves for hunting. Regardless of their destination, all the birds sell.

Every producer who makes a valid effort to sell the birds can sell them," Haynes said. "There seems to be a market for them."

Quail could have been developed years ago as a farming enterprise for Mississippi if not for the threat of quail pox, a disease fatal to bobwhite quail. Quail pox is similar to fowl pox in that both diseases are caused by a virus and can wipe out bird populations.
